

Book review

House of many ways By Diana Wynne Jones

I would recommend this book to a girl who really likes reading. What I like about this book, is that in nearly every chapter a new character is introduced. Also I like this book because something different and exciting happens in each chapter.

It's about this girl called Charmain, who loves reading. It starts when her parents volunteer for her to look after Great uncle Williams house while he's away because he's ill, and strange things happen in the house. She writes a letter to the king saying could she sort out all their books in order, and that's where the main part of the story starts.

There's also a small dog called Waif who follows Charmain everywhere, and a little boy called Twinkle, and loads more characters.

I would give it 9/10. It's a really interesting book and I would definitely recommend it to others.
